Endorse Dole? Perot says no

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Ross Perot Thursday called Bob Dole's effort Lito persuade him to quit the presidential race and endorse the Republican ticket "weird and totally inconsequential" and said he was in the race to stay.

Perot said, he would not discuss details of his meeting with Dole campaign manager Scott Reed, who traveled to Dallas on Wednesday to urge Perot to drop out of the race and forge an alliance with Dole. But Perot said, "Do I intend to campaign to the oitter end? Yes.'

Campaigning in North Carolina, Perot's running mate Pat Choate said the overture was proof Dole was not a viable candidate and urged Republicans to support the Reform Party ticket. "When he knows he can't win, he asks us to bow out of the race," Choate said. Reed made the dramatic entreaty with Dole's blessing, after a week of campaign deliberations about ast-ditch ideas to erase President Clinton's persistent lead in the presidential race, according to several Republican sources in Washington, two senior Dole-Kemp campaign officials among directly answer questions about the overture. As he left his Florida hotel, the GOP nominee joked: "If you see Ross Perot, call me," and then ducked into his waiting car.

Within the Dole campaign, there were deep divisions on the wisdom of reaching out to Perot. Some advisers suggested Dole had little choice but to seek a dramatic turn of events, while others said it was a fool's errand that would only encourage Perot to ridicule the Republican candidate.

The Texas businessman complained that he gets little media attention when he talks "day after day, month after month" about the need for deficit reduction and politi-

Perot said the Democratic incumbent faced "huge moral, ethical and criminal problems" that would likely force him from office if he was given a second term in November. Specifically, Perot said Clinton had abused his office by accepting questionable campaign contributions

'Liberal media' trying to re-elect Clinton, Dole says

Associated Press

PENSACOLA, Fla. - A frustrated Bob Dole campaigned for votes in Republican teritory Thursday with an urgent appeal: Wake up, America! You're about to do ourselves an injustice if you vote for Bill

Dole angrily criticized President Clinton's ethics and claimed the "liberal media" was rying to re-elect the Democratic incumbent.

To Clinton, Dole said, "this is all a power game. It's a game. It's a game. It's a game. ... We've lost respect all around the world.'

With polls showing him consistently trailng Clinton even in many Republican strongtolds, Dole acknowledged his frustration to upporters at a rally in a Pensacola Junior College gym.

"I know everybody gets frustrated. I even get frustrated, and I'm the most optimistic nan in America," Dole said.

"I wonder sometimes what people are thinkng about or if people are thinking at all — if they've really watched this administration, watched what's happened in this White House. Aides said Dole was angry that word had leaked Wednesday of a secret mission by campaign manager Scott Reed to ask Reform Party candidate Ross Perot to drop from the race and endorse the GOP ticket.

Perot, speaking in Washington on Thursday, said he's in the race "to the bitter end" and dismissed the overture from the Dole campaign as 'weird and totally inconsequential.'

Dole's effort to lock up traditionally Republican states also was taking him Thursday to Alabama, Louisiana and Texas, where polls find him neck-and-neck with Clinton.

The president, too, was campaigning in Alabama and Louisiana on Thursday. White House press secretary Mike McCurry called it political "shadow boxing.

Without mentioning Dole by name, Clinton indirectly answered the Republican's criticism about the issues of character and trust.

"This is not a question of who's good and bad," Clinton said during a speech in Birmingham, Ala. "It's a question of what's right and wrong for our future.

Dole later appeared on the steps of the Alabama statehouse in Montgomery and told supporters, "Is there no honor in this administration or in this White House? When will the American people have enough? ... Don't inflict this on America for four more years, we can't take it.

Dole also picked up an endorsement from former Gov. George Wallace, who, confined to a wheelchair, waved to the crowd from behind Dole's podium.

Before leaving Florida, Dole reminded voters that there were just 12 days left until the elec-

Spokesman Nelson Warfield said Dole was simply feeling "feisty." Indeed, once the candidate shook a few hands in the crowd, he jumped onto the band's platform, commandeered a drumstick and briefly hit the snare drum. Heading to Texas for rallies Friday in Houston and Dallas, Dole was haunted by Gov. George W. Bush's words to reporters last April: "If Senator Dole has to campaign in Texas in October, it would be a sign we are in trouble." The state hasn't voted Democrat for president since 1976, when Jimmy Carter won there by 3 percentage points.

In Florida, Dole accused the media of covering up controversies in the Clinton White House — most recently, questionable campaign donations from foreign interests.

"We know the liberal media is not going to report on all these things. They want him reelected," Dole said. "The truth is, Bill Clinton ought to be voted out in a landslide.

From Lee Greenwood's musical performance to Dole's rhetorical one, the rally recalled the waning days of George Bush's 1992 campaign, when he too upbraided the media and the voters. Greenwood, whose music was a staple of Bush's road show, made his first appearance with Dole on Thursday.

Dole promoted the GOP plan to cut income taxes by 15 percent, which he said would let families save for things like vacation.

Orton rounds up funds for Escalante

By WHITNEY A. SMITH Universe Staff Writer

Two hundred thousand dollars has been made available by the Department of the Interior for the development of the Escalante monument in southern Utah.

Honoring his promise to get Utahns involved in the development of the controversial monument, Rep. Bill Orton, D-Utah, announced earlier this week that he has negotiated the startup funding with the department to help absorb the costs of the public planning process.

The money will be evenly split between Kane and Garfield counties and will be formally awarded once a cooperative agreement is signed between county managers and the Department of the Interior.

The funding is intended to support comprehensive economic development studies, transportation and infrastructure research issues, police and fire protection research and environmental analysis.

Orton, who vehemently opposed the manner in which President Clinton chose to create the monument earlier this fall, negotiated the money in order to allow Utah citizens to be involved in monument's creation.

Dave Lemmon, a spokesperson for Orton, said that the newly awarded funds are an excellent example of Orton's commitment to Utah.

In a press release issued Monday, Orton reaffirmed his commitment to public involvement where the Escalante monument is concerned.

"While some have simply thrown up their arms over this issue and have done nothing to lessen the negative impacts of the monument designation, I have remained committed to making the best of the situation," Orton said.

In response to the newly awarded funds, Chris Cannon's camp assertsthat the cash is insignificant when one considers the work that will be involved in getting the monument

Mike Mower, Cannon's campaign manager, said that the $200,000 is, "A band-aid to cover up a shotgun wound.'

"Bill Orton is trying to buy votes with taxpayer dollars in Kane and Garfield counties before the election." Mower said.

Anniversary of Rabin death marked by speeches, sorrow

Associated Press

JERUSALEM - Mourning the leader who had brought peace within reach, Israelis wept and prayed Thursday for Yitzhak Rabin, marking a year since his assassination by a Jewish extremist.

'We are still swimming in a sea of confusion ... looking for a way out," Rabin's grandson said. "Our world has changed. We are no longer the same family, the same people.

In the Tel Aviv square where Rabin was gunned down, thousands lit memorial candles and placed flowers on the pavement. Some embraced. Others hummed "To cry for you," a ballad that has become an anthem of lost hope, especially for younger

"Friend, we miss you," read a banner headline in the Yediot Ahronot newspaper.

The prime minister's assassination occurred Nov. 4, but according to the Hebrew calendar, the anniversary falls Thursday.

The sorrow briefly covered up the poisonous divisions in Israel that have deepened since the assassination. But even Thursday's somber ceremonies were not entirely without rancor.

Pointing an accusing finger, Rabin's son Yuval said hard-line Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu must accept some of the blame for creating the hate-filled political climate that led to Rabin's murder.

Assassin Yigal Amir says he shot Rabin to prevent him from trading land God promised the Jews for peace with the Arabs.

Netanyahu remained silent during the grave-side memorial at the request of the Rabin family.

In a speech to parliament, he did not address accusations that he bears some responsibility for inciting the assassination. Two opposition legislators walked out when Netanyahu began to speak.

Throughout the day, TV stations replayed the images that haitinbeen etched in the memory of evern leraeli: the amateur video showing Amir firing the fatal shots at the end of the Nov. 4 peace rally, the announcement by Rabin's aide that the prime minister had died on the operating table of a Tel Aviv hospital and the eulogy by Rabin's freckle-faced granddaughter Noa, who had moved the world by speaking of her own personal loss.

A year later, another Rabin grandchild, Yonathan Ben-Artzi, eulogized the military man who late in life had embarked on the risky path of peace.

"I want to ask for your forgiveness, grandfather," Ben-Artzi said in a memorial ceremony at Mount Herzl Cemetery. "Forgive us for not protecting you like we should have."

A world away in the Gaza strip, Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat also spoke warmly of his former enemy.

U.S. asked to be 'conciliatory' in spy case

SEOUL, South Korea - North Korea said Thursday the case against a captured American charged with espionage cannot be resolved unless Washington adopts a more conciliatory attitude.

"If the United States adopts a negative attitude ... toward the spy case ... the possibility of a solution will be gloomier," said North Korea's official Korean Central News Agency.

"Hunziker is a criminal who infiltrated into (North Korea) in violation of its law and a spy manipulated by the puppet" South Korea, it said.

The agency said Hunziker had confessed he was on a spy mission to report on "the conditions of the army, the life of civilians, economic conditions and

"Barbie is like a Trojan Horse," Ghaderi said. "Inside it, it carries its Western cultural influences, such as makeup and indecent clothes. Once it enters our society, it dumps these influences on our children.'

Utah to round up buffalo herds for checkup

ANTELOPE ISLAND — The annual bison roundup at Antelope Island State Park is keeping the site environmentally sound while attracting increasing numbers of tourists, officials say.

More than 700 of the animals will be herded this weekend by helicopter, 450 horseback riders and trucks into corrals on the north end of the Great Salt Lake

Once behind fences, the bison will be vaccinated and checked for health problems. About 100 will then be sold at auction in early November.

The roundup and the auction have become a tourist event, bringing those curious about the buffalo herds that once roamed the western Plains by the mil-

"Judging from the phone calls I've received from out of state, there is more interest this year than before," said Tim Smith, park superintendent. "People think it is a neat Western adventure.'

Man convicted of poisoning wife at party

DETROIT — A businessman whose three wives and mother died in suspicious circumstances was convicted Thursday of first-degree murder in the cocaine poisoning of his third wife.

The jury reached a verdict on the third day of deliberations in the case of Lowell Amos, accused of killing Roberta Mowery Amos.

They were from Indiana, where authorities have been reviewing the deaths of Amos' first two wives and his mother. All died while he was living with them. Amos was the last person to see them alive, authorities said.

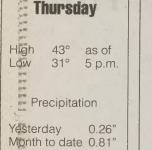

Amos, 53, formerly of Birmingham and Anderson, Ind., claimed his third wife's death was an accidental overdose following a Christmas party for her husband's employment agency. An autopsy revealed that she had 15 times the amount of cocaine needed to cause death.

Prosecutors said Amos killed his wife because he was in financial trouble and she was preparing to file for divorce.

The Detroit jury was allowed to hear evidence involving the death of Amos's second wife but not those of the two other women.

Although the Utah County Elections Office has closed its doors to voter registration, anyone who may have missed the mid-October deadline can still register to vote at various locations in Provo and Orem Monday and

According to a press release from the Utah County Elections Office, Utah election laws prohibit voters from registering in the elections for 20 days prior to the November 5 election; however, the Elections Office has arranged for voter registration to take place at satellite registration offices throughout Utah County on October 28 and 29 only.

Donna Mitchell, supervisor for elections in Utah County, said that there are many locations in the Provo/Orem area where students may register to vote from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. In Provo, registration locations include Timpview High School, Provo High School, Provo City Hall lobby and the Utah County Offices lobby.

In Orem, registration locations include Windsor Elementary School, University Mall and the Orem City

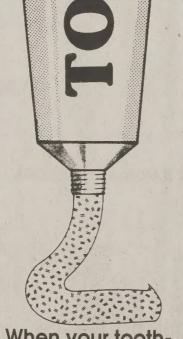

Registration tables for the University Mall satellite registration office will be located in the ZCMI Court and Mervyn's Court.

"The reason that prospective voters have these two extra days is that we hire extra help for people that are off on Saturdays and Sundays and weren't able to come down and register before," Mitchell said.

Reminding students who aren't Utah residents that they can lose their state residency if they register to vote, he said, "If they're really planning on staying here in Utah, it is important to register to vote," Mitchell said. "If they're leaving Utah, what laws they pass on do affect those that will stay

Mitchell said students should call before Friday to make sure that they are registered to vote so they can use the extra days if necessary.

Cheerleaders promote Red Ribbon Week

Every child has a hero. Some look up to their fathers. Some look up to tough cartoon characters. But for some local elementary students, the heroes are BYU cheerleaders.

Red Ribbon Week, an annual tradition geared towards teaching children how to stay away from drugs and other harmful substances, was held Monday through today at local elementary schools. After meeting with UTA and the city, the Downtown Retail Merchants Association concluded that Main Street must remain open, even if only to one lane of traffic.

Zions Bank was also concerned about how the pedestriaan mall would impact businesses, delivery accessibility and parking and access for handicapped individuals in this area, said Scott Anderson, representative of Zions Bank. Though the city followed Corradini's suggestion to not close South Temple to 100 South, it is still considering closing North Temple to South Temple. This closure may impact area residents, said Don Adams, transportation engineer at Sear-Brown group. The main concern heard by residents at the Sept. 50 meeting was the possible re-routing of traffic to area neighborhoods if North Temple to South Temple is "Residents would like to see traffic from the parking" of structures go west, not north, and that traffic be discouraged on North Main," said Randall Dixon, member of the apitol Hill Neighborhood Council

William Wright, city planning director, said that the City Council would make their decision to close North Temple to South Temple by Dec. 10, 1996.

Camp Williams training stretches Y cadets

Editor's note: This is the first in a two-part series about the Army ROTC's training and competitions.

By ALECIA H. FINLINSON Universe Staff Writer

Army ROTC cadets "tightened up their boot straps" for a 24-hour adventure last weekend at a field training experience at Camp Williams.

The cadets' first reconnaissance mission started the moment the truck stopped at Camp Williams' desert scene, west of the Point of the Mountain, on Oct. 18.

The mission was supposed to prowide leadership opportunities for the freshman, sophomore and junior cadets. Upon receiving a mission and leading their squad to accomplish it, the cadets' leadership abilities were being evaluated by their senior cadet

Following every mission, the cadets gathered to conduct an after-action report reviewing strengths and weaknesses of the leader and his or her instructions in embracing the mission. A new leader was then chosen, and another mission begun.

"It was a good learning opportunity because we were doing things that we hadn't really done before except for in labs," said Carl Smith, a freshman from Covina, Calif., majoring in physical therapy. "It's an opportunity we don't get very often.' Soon after dark, the cadets made a quick water stop and took a few minutes to partake of some MRE rejuvenation. MRE stands for Meals Ready to Eat and is the typical food eaten in the army. They have a seven-year shelf life and are about 3,600 calories per meal.

"When you're out there rucking all day, they are definitely not Sizzler Steak House! The more you work, the better they taste. That's the goal — to work really hard so they taste so good," said Jonathan Lambert, a sophomore from Centerville majoring in-international relations.

The cadets then reassembled and marched off into the hills for platoon operations. Visibility was poor, making communication difficult. After a few hours of anticipating the enemy's thrown and the school mates raged into battle with M-16 shots and more grenade simulators. No one was hurt, however, because they used blanks instead of bullets.

"When the defense kept moving, it was challenging. The challenge of trying to find the other group without being detected excited the cadets,' said Capt. Bill Boucher, assistant professor of military science.

After the ambush the cadets gathered again. Thinking the night was young — 2 a.m. — they began a sixmile tactical road march carrying their rucksacks on their backs and a weapon in their hands to the mess hall where they were to sleep for the night or, by that time, the morning.

"We started, and everybody was gung-ho thinking, 'we'll be able to do it easy!' Arriving at the half-hour mark, the one-hour mark and the hour-and-a-half mark — then it was getting pretty hard. It was pretty much about trying to keep yourself going

Then if the weather turned bad, they were still able to accomplish something, they were able to push themselves," said Boucher. "Incrementally, we push them a little further, and they

The cadets arrived at the mess hall to hot chocolate and then to a cozy spot on the kitchen floor around 4:30

They woke to rain and snow, cleaned their weapons and went home early due to the weather. Many cadets expressed disappointment in not being able to complete the events planned for the day, especially the rappelling.

"It's kind of bad because we miss out on a day of training that these guys only get to do once a semester," said Jim Oliphant, a senior from Oregon majoring in political science.

"Our prime objective coming out here was to accomplish the things that we did last night — leadership evaluations," said Lt. Col. Jack Sullivan, professor of military science. "The real training value occurred between the evaluator and the cadet.

"There are certain skills that in order to be successful you must have, and that's what we teach," said Sullivan.

Coach Rockwood said that the team was fortunate to go into overtime so they could get the opportunity to win.

And that's exactly what the team did as Rohbock headed in a goal off a corner kick, with the assist from Michelle Jensen. The game wasn't over yet, but the goal was enough to secure the win for BYU.

"I've been waiting for my first header in as a goal and Michelle just gave me a great ball that went in,' Rohbock said.

Coach Rockwood was pleased with the win and said the team tried to make the game as exciting as possible. She commented on the power from the Aztecs, but said the game was pretty even.

"Our defense did a great job in shutting down San Diego," Rockwood said. "Emily Lubeck was given a lot eir lapse allowed SDSU to score of trouble from the Aztecs' a on the Cougars from a corner LaCarrsiera. And our defenders

BYU's goalkeeper Camille Thomas said the game was very busy. "Our fullbacks are amazing," Thomas said. "It makes my saves easy."

The team is excited about its game Saturday against Hawaii. Rockwood expressed the importance of beating Hawaii, saying that if they win the WAC tournament will be hosted in Provo this year. She hopes they can do their best because she feels the team plays its best at home.

Team members Rohbock and Thomas echo Rockwood's opinion saying they would really like to host the tournament at home.

The team is working on keeping up a strong mentality, according to Rockwood. She knows they need to be prepared and up for their game against Hawaii, who has posed stiff competition in their other games. Y spikers face challenge in Lobos, Miners

By BRANDON J. WIGHT Universe Sports Writer

The BYU women's volleyball team will take its eight-match winning streak and second-place tie in the WAC standings down south this weekend — to the home courts of WAC leader New Mexico and the other second-place team, UTEP.

New Mexico, (10-7, 6-0) who struggled in a rugged preseason schedule, has bounced back with a seven-match winning streak. The Lobos' biggest victories have been against Fresno State in their first WAC match of the season, and against WAC rival UTEP. The UTEP win gave New Mexico sole possession of first place in the Mountain Division of the WAC.

UTEP (15-4, 6-1) is enjoying its best season since joining the WAC six years ago. Until now, UTEP had won just two WAC matches and had never had an overall winning record while a member of the WAC.

'Both New Mexico and UTEP are good teams," BYU head coach Elaine Michaelis said. "New Mexico is a good defensive team - it's hard to put the ball away on them. UTEP has an excellent group of seniors, which is different from most of the Mountain Division. We'll have to be on top of our game to come out with

Five teen-agers accused in the shooting death of the father of a girl they knew have been bound over for trial

Leikina Lavulavu, 19, and Beau Heaps, 17, are charged with murder, a first-degree felony, in the August shooting death of John Freitag, Orem. Nua Unga, 19, Bo Malupo, 18, and Tonga MoUunga, 19, are charged with second-degree felony homicide by assault in Freitag's death.

The charges are enhanced because a firearm was used in the alleged crime, which took place within 1,000 feet of Fourth District Judge Ray M. Harding on Wednesday bound the defendants over for trial following a preliminary hearing.

"If seven guys had beat him to death, they'd be facing homocide charges," said Deputy Utah County Attorney John Allan. In a taped interview, Lavulavu admitted to Orem Police Detective Gary Downey to shooting Freitag because he thought he held a gun. David Niumeitolu, 19, who agreed to testify as part of his plea bargain with prosecutors, said Heaps gave directions to the group to go to Freitag's home on the night of the But MoUunga's defense attorney

Danny Frazier said prosecutors are blaming all the defendants for the shooting death when only Heaps and Lavulavu should be held responsible. Defense attorney Tom Patton argued that Unga was so drunk he never made it to Freitag's home. And defense attorney Brook Sessions said Malupo wanted nothing to do with a Late Monday, Anthony Tai, 26, agreed to plead guilty to attempted aggravated assault, a class A misdemeanor, in connection with the death. He had been charged with homicide by assault.

Niumeitolu has pleaded guilty to unrelated charges of escape from official custody and driving under the influence of alcohol.

FORUM | Tuesday, October 29, 11 a.m., Marriott Center

Dr. Jean Bethke Elshtain

Laura Spelman Rockefeller Professor of Social and Political Ethics University of Chicago Divinity School.

> "American Democracy at Century's End: Where Have We Been? Where Are We Going?"

"Democracy is on trial in America. Expert and ordinary opinion converges on a sober recognition: We live in an age of political resentment and withdrawal from civic life. What can be done to revivify American democracy? Some propose electronic solutions—technological means to register instantly the popular will—but others, myself included, see in the proposed solution a deepening of our current troubles. Why? Because democracy is not and has never been primarily a means whereby popular will is tabulated and enacted but, rather, a political world within which citizens deliberate, negotiate, compromise, engage, and hold themselves and those they choose to represent them accountable for actions taken. Have we lost this deliberative and dialogical dimension to democracy? For democracy's enduring promise is that democratic citizens can come to know a good in common that they cannot know alone."

Professor Elshtain, a political philosopher whose chosen task has been to show the connections between our political and our ethical convictions, earned her PhD in politics at Brandeis University in 1973 and then joined the faculty of the University of Massachusetts/Amherst. She joined the Vanderbilt University faculty in 1988 as the first woman to hold an endowed professorship in the history of that institution. She was appointed to her current position at the University of Chicago in 1995. A visiting professor at Oberlin College, Yale University, and Harvard University, Professor Elshtain received an honorary doctor of law degree from Gonzaga University in 1996.

STRUTTING ON THE PLANK: A bunch of singing pirates make last year's Friday Night Live a rousing good time. More of the same will be taking place tonight for those who dare with activities starting at 8 p.m. in the Smith Fieldhouse.

Friday Night Live By MICHELLE KOWALSKI

Universe Staff Writer

Another boring Friday night with nothing to do. BYUSA suggests joining them for some fun at Friday

The event will take place at the Smith Fieldhouse tonight from 8 p.m. until midnight, but the Mr. BYU

Cost with student ID is $3; without ID it is $4. Booths with games and food will have tickets sold separately.

Various clubs on campus will have booths for selling food or playing games. Emilyann Ritzman, the advertising director of Friday Night Live, said, "It's a multiclub fund-raiser." She said most of the clubs on campus will participate. While most of the activities will take place in the Fieldhouse, there will be performances in the N. Eldon Tanner Building, said McKenzie Potter, an executive director of BYUSA. Divine Comedy will be performing in 151 TNRB, and Vocal Point will be in 251 TNRB. The price of these shows is included in the cost of Friday Night Live.

Potter said other activities will include paintball games, a velcro wall and jousting. Costumes are encouraged, but BYUSA has asked that masks are not worn and that men do not wear skirts or dresses.

Ritzman said if enough costumes are worn, there will be a costume judging with prizes.

At 7 p.m., there will be a Mr. BYU contest. Ritzman said it will be like a beauty pageant with 13 single male participants. The winner of the competition will be announced at 8 p.m.

Actors dressed as the Grim Reaper and Frankenstein's Bride have been spotted on campus advertising Friday Night Live. A parade will tour the campus today to continue the advertising,

"In order for this to keep happening and for the clubs to have a big fund-raiser, we planned something big," Ritzman said. "It's an all-out pre-Halloween

Single BYU men sporting beach wear will parade in the Smith Fieldhouse Friday from 7 to 8 p.m. as part of BYUSA's "Friday Night Live"

"The Mr. BYU pageant is meant to be a lot of fun," said Marlise Walker, a freshman from Bakersfield, Calif., majoring in broadcast communications and co-chair of the Mr. BYU

Contestants will be escorted in and introduced to the audience. Each participant will then compete in the beach wear, creative talent and evening wear events. After a final interview session with each of the candidates, winners will be decided by three female judges.

Although there will be only one Mr. BYU and two runners-up, everyone will receive a prize, Walker said.

Several men responded to advertisements, which were passed out around campus, but the field was narrowed to 13 who will be in Friday's show, she Matt Madson, a freshman from Salt Lake City majoring in human biology, thinks he and his roommates are going to take it all.

"Ben Pehrson is the underdog in the contest," Madson said, "but he is going to come from behind and be crowned Mr. BYU." Madson also predicted that Justin Crop would be named first runner-up and that he would be named second. The three will be in the talent competition

Pehrson is a freshman from Salt Lake City majoring in zoology, and Crop, a freshman from Newburgh, N.Y., majoring in computer science. Madson joined the contest after coaxing from a neighbor.

Madson, although quite willing to bare his chest in public, said that the beach wear was all BYU-approved and met with BYU standards
